The 5-Step System Disconnection Checklist

Find where your business is leaking time, in 10 minutes.

Most growing companies don't have a software problem. They have a fragmented systems problem. Tick every statement that is true for your business, then add up your score on page 2.

1 Map where your data lives

STEP 1 OF 5

- [ ] We use more than three separate tools to run sales, operations and finance.
- [ ] The same customer, product or order details are typed into more than one system.
- [ ] Nobody could list every spreadsheet the business depends on.

2 Find the unofficial spreadsheets

STEP 2 OF 5

- [ ] At least one team keeps its own tracker because "the system is always a day behind".
- [ ] Important numbers live in a spreadsheet only one person understands.
- [ ] Month-end means copying data between files.

3 Test how much you trust your numbers

STEP 3 OF 5

- [ ] Review meetings start with a debate about whose numbers are right.
- [ ] Sales, inventory, production and finance report different versions of the same figure.
- [ ] We have dashboards, but people still ask for the spreadsheet.

4 Measure decision delays

STEP 4 OF 5

- [ ] A simple customer question, like “Can we deliver by Friday?”, needs three or more people to answer.
- [ ] Approvals wait in email or chat for days.
- [ ] Decisions depend on follow-ups instead of what the system shows.

5 Count the manual hours

STEP 5 OF 5

- [ ] Someone spends hours every week compiling reports by hand.
- [ ] Errors from re-typed data reach customers or invoices.
- [ ] New hires take weeks to learn the workarounds.

Your score

Count your ticks out of 15

0–3	Your systems are mostly connected. Watch each new tool you add as you grow.
4–8	Friction is creeping in. Fixing one or two handoffs now saves months later.
9–15	Your team is working around your systems, not with them. It’s time to connect them.

What to do next

Start with the step where you ticked the most boxes. Map that workflow end to end, find the slowest handoff and fix it first, whether that’s an integration, an automation or one system that replaces several.
